

MOUNT HARMON PLANTATION

FACT SHEET

Mount Harmon is one of the few remaining colonial era plantations open to the public, and is a historic and scenic treasure. The plantation is situated on a peninsula formed by creeks and inlets of the Sassafras River in Cecil County, Maryland, known on early maps as World's End.

Mount Harmon Plantation consists of:

A manor house c. 1730, colonial kitchen, formal boxwood garden, rare tobacco prize house, nature preserve, and a scenic waterfront location.

200 acres of pristine open space, with nature trails, abundant wildlife and rare flora.

Brick Georgian Manor House circa 1730, furnished with American, English, Irish, and Scottish antiques, and restored to reflect its colonial period.

Colonial Kitchen furnished with 18th c. kitchenware and artifacts.

Prize House, where tobacco was “prized” into barrels before shipping overseas.

Formal brick serpentine walled boxwood garden.

- ◆ Mount Harmon Plantation is open to the public for tours Thursday – Sunday, 10:00am – 3:00pm, May – October, and by appointment year around for school and special groups. Group tours at special rates by reservation.
- ◆ Mount Harmon is also available for weddings, corporate retreats and private events, and is a spectacular setting for any special occasion.
- ◆ Mount Harmon is listed on the National Historic Register, is an official Chesapeake Bay Gateway Network site, and is located along the National Scenic Byway.
- ◆ Mount Harmon has active membership, educational, fund raising, special events, and visitor programming. Mount Harmon teaches visitors of every age about the lifestyle, culture, agriculture and trade of a colonial era plantation.
- ◆ Mount Harmon’s Education Program provides a window into our colonial heritage, with tours of the manor house, colonial demonstrations and games, and nature walk.
- ◆ Mount Harmon is administered by Friends of Mount Harmon, Inc. a non profit organization dedicated to the preservation and interpretation of Mount Harmon, for the public’s education and enjoyment.

Visit www.mountharmon.org or call 410-275-8819 for more information.